

ROUTES DU BONHEUR Kyushu, a journey to southern Japan

Firstly, the light is very different from the other islands. Then, there are the lunar landscapes overlooked by Mount Aso, one of the archipelago's most majestic volcanoes. Kyushu offers another side to Japan, where bamboo and palm trees stand next to crater lakes. A delightful digression untouched by time ...

Wasurenosato Gajoen

Hotel and restaurant in the country. Here, a few chickens amble across the courtyard; there, a fish leaps from the pond. Nature, in this hamlet of thatched-roofed cottages tucked away in the heart of the forest, right next to a river, is all enveloping. Each tiny house, perched on rock and swathed in greenery, houses a suite furnished and decorated in the most traditional of styles, conjuring feelings of infinite peace. The door slides open and leads to a natural stone bath fed by a hot-water spring. In the morning, guests take breakfast in a dining room next to the river. Cuisine is authentic, delicate and subtly aromatic, prepared from vegetables straight from the kitchen garden.

Tenku no Mori

Hotel and restaurant in the woods. It is through reconnecting with nature that one's humanity can be discovered. Driven by his vision, the site's owner has spent over twenty years landscaping the woods and hills, excavating the hot springs, to give birth to this rare place. Set deep in the four seasons forest and overlooking the volcanic mountains of Kagoshima, a handful of discreet villas welcome those in search of serenity. Tranquility reigns, open air baths and spas soothe the body, and the spectacular view over Mount Kirishima calms the spirit. Rooted in its region, the restaurant serves original cuisine with seasonal vegetables from the garden and chickens raised on its own farm.
