ROUTES DU BONHEUR The cultural voyage through historic houses from London across the Berkshire Downs

London definitely merits a trip by itself - and its own Route du Bonheur! Yet, beyond Britain's capital, an entire region lies in wait with unexpected surprises in store. Royal castles, century-old regattas, treasured libraries, legendary horse races and universities follow one after another amid green scenery. While on this route, you never quite know who you'll bump into: fishermen and jockeys, lords of the manor or even Churchill's ghost. All England is distilled here, with its endearing and elegant sense of style and humour...

The Chelsea Townhouse

Nestled in London's prestigious Royal Borough of Kensington & Chelsea, The Chelsea Townhouse has created spacious rooms and suites across three neighboring redbrick Victorian properties. They are part of an identical enclave of buildings surrounding Cadogan Gardens, one of a small number of private parks in the capital normally only accessible by residents with a key. However, in a highly exclusive arrangement, the hotel's Drawing Room and select suites offer guests direct access to the leafy gardens. Meticulously restored, the hotel seamlessly blends British charm with contemporary elegance. With marble fireplaces, gilded mirrors, old engravings, plush carpet, and eclectic juxtapositions—an Art Nouveau pedestal table paired with an Empire dressing table, say—the decor evokes a cozy and quirky British style, making the townhouse feel like a particularly high-end guest house. Under its high ceilings, large windows offer abundant natural light and views over the trees in the square. Chelsea's charms are not far beyond, with iconic shopping destinations including Sloane Street and The King's Road just footsteps away, and a host of cultural attractions including the Saatchi Gallery, Buckingham Palace and the Natural History Museum close by. The service is as discreet as it is attentive, and with its blend of timeless charm, modern luxury, and access to London's finest attractions, The Chelsea Townhouse offers an unparalleled experience in the heart of the city.
