ROUTES DU BONHEUR Périgord, heritage and grand terroir

To arouse excitement for a trip to the Périgord and Dordogne regions, one need only mention its exceptional World Heritage Sites, be they the ornate caves of the Vézère valley--including the sublime Lascaux Cave complex--or the steep paths leading to Santiago de Compostela. Visits to Sarlat-la-Canéda, Rocamadour, and Padirac will remain etched in the memories of both young and old alike. This valley of the Dordogne river is so unique that it has been classified as a UNESCO biosphere reserve since 2012...

Le Vieux Logis

Hotel and restaurant in a village. Author Henry Miller knew and loved France better than many French people. He was always in search of, inspirational locations. He originally planned to spend a week at this hotel in the heart of the black Périgord but ended up staying a month. Inside the former tobacco drying barn that has been converted into a dining room or outside under the linden trees, Miller's spirit lives on. Like the author, you will appreciate the tranquillity of this former priory with its lovely gardens, babbling brook and natural pool in which you can swim. While away the hours in a relaxed atmosphere until dusk approaches and it is time to do a tasting of some fabulous regional wines.

Château de la Treyne

Hotel and restaurant on a river. The towers of this château are so close to the river that it feels as if they are floating on it. Located between the Lot, known as the “land of marvels”, and the Dordogne, home to more than one thousand châteaux, the Château de la Treyne is the ideal base from which to set off and explore this fascinating region. The Chef adapts the cuisine of the terroir, based on foie gras or lamb from the Causses du Quercy nature park. A delicious dinner can be enjoyed in the Grand Louis XIII Salon, or on the terrace overlooking the Dordogne. Breathe in pure, fresh air and look around wide-eyed to take in this extraordinary setting.

Weekly closing :
Restaurant: lunch from Tuesday to Saturday and Wednesday evening.
